IN REMOVAL PROCEEDINGS

APPEAL

ON BEHALF OF RESPONDENT: John M. Pope, Esquire

CHARGE:

Notice: Sec. 212(a)(6)(A)(i), I&N Act [8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(A)(i)] -
Present without being admitted or paroled

Sec. 212(a)(2)(A)(i)(I), I&N Act [8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(2)(A)(i)(I)] -
Crime involving moral turpitude

APPLICATION: Termination; cancellation; waiver of inadmissibility

This case is presently before us pursuant to (b) (6) decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the (b) (6) granting the respondent's petition for review, reversing the Board's decision of January 26, 2007, and remanding for further proceedings. The record will be remanded to the Immigration Judge for further proceedings.

The Court determined that the respondent's conviction under Cal. Penal Code § 273.5(a), abuse of a cohabitant, was not categorically a crime involving moral turpitude (CIMT). See Morales-Garcia v. Holder, 567 F.3d 1058 (9th Cir. 2009). The Court remanded for the Board to apply the modified categorical approach to determine if the respondent's conviction is for a CIMT.

Subsequent to our January 26, 2007, decision in this case, the Attorney General issued his decision in Matter of Silva-Trevino, 24 I&N Dec. 687 (A.G. 2008); see generally Marmolejo-Campos v. Holder, 558 F.3d 903, 907 n.6 (9th Cir. 2009) (acknowledging decision in Silva-Trevino). In Silva-Trevino, the Attorney General concluded that to determine whether a conviction is for a CIMT, immigration judges and the Board should do the following: (1) look to the statute of conviction under the categorical inquiry and determine whether there is a "realistic probability" that the criminal statute pursuant to which the alien was convicted would be applied to reach conduct that does not involve moral turpitude; (2) if the categorical inquiry does not resolve the question, engage in a modified categorical inquiry and examine the record of conviction; and (3) if the record of conviction is inconclusive, consider any additional evidence deemed necessary or appropriate to resolve accurately the moral turpitude question.

(b) (6)

Here, applying the modified categorical approach, the record of conviction does not show whether the respondent inflicted corporal injury on the type of victim which involves a CIMT (Group Exh. 2). See (b) (6) v. Holder, supra, at (b) (6) (citing, e.g., Grageda v. INS, 12 F.3d 919 (9th Cir. 1993)).

Pursuant to Silva-Trevino, therefore, step 3 of the CIMT analytical framework provides for consideration of any additional evidence to resolve the matter. However, we conclude that a remand for this purpose is not necessary. This is because the respondent remains removable under section 212(a)(6)(A)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(A)(i).

We conclude that a remand is necessary to determine whether the respondent is eligible for cancellation of removal. See section 240A(b) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1229b(b). The record does not reflect that the respondent submitted an application for cancellation of removal (Form EOIR 42-B) and the requisite filing fee. See 8 C.F.R. §§ 1003.24, 1003.31(a). The respondent indicated an intent to file for such relief (Tr. at 11). The failure to properly file the application shall be addressed on remand with an opportunity for the respondent to file such application. If an application is tendered as required, it will be governed by the provisions of the REAL ID Act. See Matter of S-B-, 24 I&N Dec. 42 (BIA 2006). Accordingly, the respondent would have to properly file his application and fee, and would have the burden to establish that his conviction was not pursuant to any part of the statute that reaches conduct involving moral turpitude. See Matter of Almanza-Arenas, 24 I&N Dec. 771 (BIA 2009).

Accordingly, the following order will be entered.

ORDER: The record is remanded to the Immigration Judge for further proceedings and the entry of a new decision consistent with the foregoing opinion.
